The cost information provided in this document is also relevant for those types of transactions.

Indicative costs and charges

The table of cost and charges above reflects indicative levels of one-off transaction cost and charges.

Please note that the actual level of cost and charges for a transaction in a specific financial instrument will depend amongst others on the following factors:

- transaction size;
- liquidity;

- market conditions;
- funding costs;
- clearing and settlement cost;
- market risk;
- credit and counterparty risks;
- operational risks; and
- for OTC derivative transactions, the existence of a Credit Support Annex (CSA).

The above factors may cause that the cost and charges to be higher or lower than the indicative cost and charges we provide herein.

The indicative cost and charges are provided in relation to an assumed notional based on the maximum rates available, investment or transaction amount and are shown both as percentage of that amount and as an absolute amount in EUR. For transactions in any currency other than EUR, the indicative cost and charges may be read as if the amounts in the table were set out in that currency.

Effect of the cost on the return of the financial instrument

One-off transaction cost will be incurred immediately at the execution of the transaction in a financial instrument. The effect of these costs is to reduce the return or value of the financial instrument with this amount (or this percentage of the notional). The lack of any ongoing cost, incidental cost or exit cost means that there are no anticipated spikes or fluctuations in the cost after execution of the transaction that could affect the return of the financial instrument. In exceptional cases, where ongoing cost, incidental cost and/or exist cost would apply to a specific transaction in a financial instrument or a service, we will provide you separately with an illustration showing the cumulative effect of costs on return.

Ex post disclosures

We will make available annual ex post statements of actual costs and charges ('Ex-post disclosures') to clients as required by MiFID II. As such, Ex-post disclosures will be made available to clients where we (i) have marketed a product or had to provide the client with a Key Information Document ('KID') and (ii) where we have determined it has an ongoing relationship with the client for the purposes of Ex-post disclosure requirements under MiFID II.

If you would like further information on the costs and charges in the Ex post disclosures, please contact us.
